History of the Tickets

Get a limited edition ticket from one of the performances canceled by Led Zeppelin in Chicago as a result of the untimely death of their drummer, John Henry Bonham, the night before the tickets went on sale.

Zeppelin's return to North American Stages was supposed to begin Oct. 17 in Montreal and continue through mid-November, with stops at a number of arenas throughout the East and Midwest USA.

The band's management unveiled the list of tour dates on Sept. 11, 1980. While this leg of the tour was too short to satiate pent-up demand for live Led Zeppelin performances in North America, it would follow the demands of Robert Plant after the untimely death of his son. Led Zeppelin disbanded just after canceling the remainder of the 1980 tour and shortly after shared their decision with the world in a press release.
